Candidate: Kristen Lamb  Position: Creativity Network Chair Elect

Creativity is the heartbeat of education. My experience as a former public-school science educator sparked my passion for creativity and continues to drive my work in creativity research. My mission in the field of education is to enhance and prioritize the role of creativity in educational contexts for all students. Additionally, addressing the gap between research and practice is an integral part of who I am. Much of my work focuses on translating research to practice and sharing evidence-based practices that support creative thinking with teachers and parents. My vision as chair elect for NAGC’s Creativity Network is to build upon the work of past and current network leaders and promote creativity as an essential skill for all students through learning practices and materials that are rooted in scholarly work.
