Tiffany Blassingame, Special Schools and Programs Chair
Director of Academics, Midtown International School

Network Vision Statement
Over the past 20 years, I have served as an educator for schools in South Carolina and Georgia within varied school communities. I currently serve as the Director of Academics at Midtown International School, a school designed for gifted learners in Atlanta, GA. In this role, I support cultural diversity and the underrepresented gifted populations in both the public and independent school sectors. As chair of the NAGC Special Schools/Program Network, I am interested in creating avenues for consistent communication between varied schools and programs that serve gifted students to share resources and knowledge. I would also like to dive deeper into the successes and challenges of these programs and find ways to celebrate them with the larger NAGC community by writing articles and creating visual posts (videos, social media, etc). My vision of the network is to be an active resource for each other and for the NAGC community.
